

Introduction to examinations at South London Dance School

Our Imperial Society of Teachers' of Dance (ISTD) examination sessions usually take place in our own studios at the end of the spring term (note – weekday examinations take place during school hours) with additional practises scheduled on Sunday's from February onwards.

ISTD examinations from Primary ballet / Grade 1 tap & modern and above are OFQUAL accredited and Grade 6 and Intermediate examinations are awarded UCAS points.

We expect children to take examinations that they have worked for and feel it is an important part of their learning in dance. Examinations are a good consolidation of the work / skills incorporated within the grade and gives the children a focus and sense of achievement that will build confidence and improve their standard in dance. They are a high standard to pass and therefore require practice at home in the same way your child would prepare for academic examinations. If you do not wish your child to take dance examinations with us then please inform us when you are first contacted about examinations.

The opportunity for a student to enter a dance examination is at the sole discretion of the teacher and correspondence will not be entered into. If an examination is not taken for any reason when offered by the teacher, it is at the sole discretion of the teacher whether the student remains at the same level and waits to take the examination in the next available examination session, or progresses to the next level without taking the examination. Children are not normally permitted to miss two consecutive examinations in the same dance genre unless circumstances are exceptional.

Below is an outline of what you can expect with regard to approximate timing and order of examinations, however, many children may take examinations earlier or later than below depending on their physical development and level of learning. Ballet examinations in particular may take place later than detailed below and children who join us after school Reception are very likely to take all of their examinations at a later date in order to gain suitable experience.
